

Indian Foreign Policy Challenges in Modi Sarkar 2.0 - II

28 May – 6 June 2019

News/Op-ed	Key Takeaway
Trump, trade and trust Sanjaya Baru The Indian Express	Part of the reason why India is at the receiving end of Trump's trade tantrums is because he may have fallen into the trap we created of projecting India as a "Rising Power" and the "World's Fastest Growing Economy".
A rocky road for strategic partners Mohammed Ayoob The Hindu	The Iranian share of Indian oil imports stood at 10%. While it would not be impossible for India to replace Iranian oil, the American announcement failed to consider the strategic importance of Iran in Indian foreign policy and the damage it could do to India-Iran relations.
Modi, Resist the Urge to Be India's Xi Jinping Andy Mukherjee Bloomberg	To grab this chance, Modi needs to rein in his strongman instincts, embrace the world, and allow India's economic institutions space to breathe.
Modi 2.0 and India's Complex Relationship With China Ankit Panda The Diplomat	The border dispute between the two countries remains as intractable as ever and concerns in Delhi about China's big strategic and economic bet on Pakistan are growing.
US-India Ties Under Modi 2.0: The Good, Bad, and Ugly Aman Thakker The Diplomat	As Prime Minister Modi looks poised to take over India's government for a second term, a key priority in his foreign policy will be continuing to advance relations with the United States. However, while Modi can expect some tangible deliverables early in his second term, he will also need to grapple with some serious challenges.
Modi's Five Foreign Policy Challenges The Policy Times	PM Modi faces five key foreign policy challenges including Permanent Membership of the UN Security Council, taking a balanced position on Iran, countering trade imbalance and border disputes with China, and Neighborhood First Policy and making south-south cooperation work. Modi Sarkar 2.0 has its hands full. The million-dollar question is, can he deliver?
